Makassar, a journey thru Eden, the Capital of Southern Celebes is now called Southern Sulawesi. The Celebes is a Portuguese name meaning "Infamous" because of the alarming number of European traders' ships wrecked of its coral littered coast in 16th and 17th Century. The Beautiful Waterfall in Bantimurung and Arched Fort Rotterdam, Dutch old colonial style house are testimony to the island's strategic position in the old spice trade.

Tana Toraja is located in north of Makassar is a "land of heavenly Kings", a belief that their Forefathers descended from heaven onto a mountain in 20 generations ago. They practiced an ancestor cult where death and after-life ceremonies are great feast, buffaloes are ceremonially sacrificed and the deceased's remain placed in coffin and interred in caves hollowed out in high cliffs. The mouth of the caves is guarded by lifelike statues who diligently look out from a balcony at the family & friends they have left behind.
